THE LATE ASSESSMENT BILL

Ir. E. lilvezey On Exciliptions-"Tax Al and Exempt None." Editor of THE TIMES: The fate of he assessment bill continues to excite considerable comment from many quarers throughout the State. Our worthy Governor is censured by many of our people, I think without due consideration. I am in favor of "taxing all and exempting none," yet I think our Governor acted wisely in defeating the new ssessment bill. It was to say the least, an inconsistent bill, and if I may so speak, a hypocritical bill, and a frauduent bill, as to the great mass of our taxpayers. It pretended to be in conformity with the 15th. article of our Bill of Rights, and yet violated the provisions of that article, as it also did Article 36 of our Bill of Rights, and as I understand Governor Brown to say there is sufficient authority (which all sensible men admit) given to us in our Bill of Rights to tax all this property that escapes tax. ation, if it was properly exercised by our tax commissioners and assessors. The fault then lies at our tax-payers' doors to-day. No need of any new assessment bill or constitutional "exemption amendment." Behold the inconsistency of the "clamor" for the defeated bill, which exempted boldly in the body of the bill, more than it possibly could We want a tax bill without exemptions, and the tax-payer should be satisfied with nothing else. We want no one-sided view of this question, no privileged class. Our people demand equitable taxation on all property as our present constitution requires.

What a spectacle is presented to our people by this "clamor" for a fraudulent, lypocritical, inconsistent assessment bill (that is dead as it ought to be): tations. Having tested the value of while it hunted up, or was trying to do so, personals-which we have the right and power already to tax. The bill exempted millions upon millions of real

Those people who are clamoring for a constitutional amendment and new assessment bills we charge with insincerity because while equitable taxation they favor exemption clauses, inserted in their new amendments, which our present constitution then, adhere to our bill of rights and It has been authentically stated that constitution as it is; until we can have and that in the event of Cleveland's they will give us one freed from any class of property, unless under the trol and management of the State. Lessened The question is now being asked-to what extent can relief from present burdens, from the inequalities and hardships resulting from the want of a new assessment, be found in the provisions of the code enacted since the last general assessment law, and for the express purpose, as understood, of supplying a prompt remedy for the defects of an assessment which is only made periodicaly and at long intervals? In 1878 the Legislature passed a law which has never been repealed, and which today stands upon the statute-book as section 137 of article 81 of the code, title "Revenue and Taxes," making it the duty of the county commissioners and of the Appeal Tax Court in this city to annually correct the assessment books by adding new property, whenever discovered, which has previously escaped assessment and consequent taxation, and also to correct and alter the assessment of individuals in the case of property already assessed, but which may have materially increased or diminished in value since the last assessment. It is obvious that if this duty were regularly and faithfully performed there would be left very little room for complaint on the score of unjust and unequal assessments, and very little need, perhaps, for a perodical general new assessment of prop-

That the duty has not been performed and that the work of annual correction and revision of the assessment books has not kept pace with changes in the value of property is attributed not so much to any neglect or fault on the part of the county commissioners or judges of the Appeal Tax Court as to the fact. Railroad facilities will be greatly in- as understood, that these officials have not had at their command the necessary assistance requisite to the proper execu-

The very general and vague language of the act of 1878 probably led to the enactment in 1884 of the further provision Ellicott City's business, done in a of law which stands as section 145 of the same article 81 of the code. It relates to the manner in which this duty of assessrecting the errors of previous assess ments shall be performed. It requires that before putting any new property on the assessment books or increasing the assessment of any property already assessed the county commissioners or the Appeal Tax Court, as the case may be, shall give notice, by printed or writerty to appear before them. The property-owner is entitled to be heard, and is entitled to at least five days' notice of the day appointed for the hearing. He may then be questioned orally or upon printed interrogatories, and if answers must do so under oath. If he fails to appear or refuses to answer, the county commissioners or the Appeal Tax Court may then assess or revalue his property, according to their best judgment and information in the premises. It will be noticed that this is essentially different from the "listing" feature of the late assessment bill, which provided penalties of fine and imprisonment for a refusal to answer, and which gave to the assessors the powers which the act of 1884 only confers upon the county commissioners and judges of the Appeal Tax Court themselves. There is no provision in the law for delegating any of these powers of putting ques tions, requiring answers under oath and assessing property to any subordinates, whether assessors or bailiffs. The law also differs from the so-called "dooming" system, which permits a person who refuses to disclose what property he may own which is subject to taxation, but has escaped assessment, to be arbitrarily assessed as worth so much money and required to pay taxes upon that amount unless he can show that his property actually does not amount to so much. The act of 1884 seemingly confines the commissioners and the Appeal Tax Court to an assessment of the specific property which the recusant taxpayer may own, and which they are authorized to put upon the books. The provisions of existing law may be, thereore, defective, considered as means designated to accomplish a certain end. It is probable, however, that these defects would be less seriously felt and the operation of the law prove more satisfactory in the counties than in this city because the field to be covered would be much smaller. Nevertheless, the city will watch with interest the result in the counties and be, doubtless, ready to follow suit and to profit by the
